Authors

Jennifer Adamson was awarded a BA (Hons) degree in Religion, Culture and Society at the University of Central Lancashire in 2014. She is now training to become a primary school teacher in Lancashire. Jennifer has enjoyed learning about religion since she was a child and continues to read theology since graduating from UCLan. She particularly enjoys the work of Gorringe, Lewis, Keller and Wright. Since working in primary schools she has developed a love for teaching Religious Education and promoting faith through the curriculum. Jennifer believes that good religious, moral and social education is essential in the early years of life, in the development of well-rounded, happy communities.

Kirsty Fitzpatrick was awarded a BA (Hons) degree in English Literature at the University of Central Lancashire in July 2014. She is currently studying for a Masters by Research at UCLan’s Institute of Black Atlantic Research. The article published here was originally submitted as a research paper for the third year undergraduate module entitled 'Black Atlantic Writing'.

Ryan Hall graduated from the University of Central Lancashire in 2014 as a Bachelor of Law with first class honours. The article published here is extracted from his final year dissertation on wildlife law, particularly the laws surrounding the ivory trade, which was awarded a first. Ryan won the Butterworth prize for best dissertation in 2014. In his spare time, Ryan can be found reading books about animals and would love nothing more than to work and protect the endangered species of the world.

Zaynab Kazi was awarded a first class BA (Hons) degree in English Language and Literature from the University of Central Lancashire in 2014. The article published here was submitted as part of her third-year dissertation on 'Sufism and Psychoanalysis'. Zaynab is currently qualifying as a secondary school English teacher and hopes to progress to postgraduate study in the near future, with an interest in studying Comparative Philosophy.

Zahra Patel graduated from the University of Central Lancashire in 2014 with a First Class BA (Hons) degree in English Language and Literature. The article published here is part of her third year dissertation on ‘Shakespeare and the Theory of the Subject’. Zahra is currently working at an educational charity in Greater Manchester and hopes to progress to postgraduate study in the future.

Dyana Saad gained a BA (Hons) degree in English Literature at the University of Central Lancashire in 2014. The article published here is extracted from her first class, third year dissertation on 'The Memory of Slavery in Bermudian Literature and Culture'. Dyana is currently undertaking a Masters by Research on 'Black Power in Bermuda', for which she received a scholarship from the Institute of Black Atlantic Research.

Jennafer Small is currently studying a Masters by Research at UCLan in the Culture of the Black Atlantic at the Institute of Black Atlantic Research. She gained a First Class BA (Hons) Degree in English Literature at UCLan in 2014, and hopes to go on to study a PhD following on from her MRes which she hopes to complete by September 2015. In her spare time she writes poetry, short stories, and has had articles published on LGBT and women's rights.

First Readers
Carolyn King (Programme Leader, Religion, Culture and Society)
Shaun Mills (Senior Lecturer in Law)
Robin Purves (Senior Lecturer in English Literature)
Alan Rice (Professor in English and American Studies)

Second Readers
Carol Banks (Editor)
Peter Lucas (Senior Lecturer in Philosophy)
Steve Marshall (Religion, Culture & Society Student)
Bridget Martin (Lecturer in Law)

Editor
Carol Banks (Consultant)

Editorial Team
Matthew Astley (Graduate, Law)
Jon Aveyard (Music/Audio Art)
David Aziz (Pharmacy & Biomedical Sciences)
Shelley Briggs (Social Work)
Michael Brightman (LBS)
Kartina Choong (Medical Law & Bioethics)
Cristina Fodarella (Postgraduate Student, Psychology)
Peggy Gregory (Computing)
Helen Hewertson (CRiT)
Angela Kilpatrick (Linguistics)
Carolyn King (Education & Social Science)
Shaun Mills (Law)
Matthew Plummer (Journalism, Media & Communication Student)
Chris Powles (Computing, Engineering & Physical Sciences)
Annette Ramsden (LIS)
Becky Smithson (Postgraduate Student, Linguistics)
Gill Thomson (Social Work & Midwifery)
Janice Wardle (Literature)